• Q-1 The Policy of Subsidiary Alliance made British stronger at the cost of Indian rulers tendering their sovereignty explain.?

Ans → The Policy of Subsidiary Alliance ~~in South asia history~~ was an ~~subsidiary~~ alliance between an Indian State and a European East India Company. ~~Yes~~, Under this policy Indians lost their Sovereignty and they become weak.

Indian State become poor because of the payment of subsidary alliance and when administration collapsed so English had occupied the States. For example — Awadh. For maintaining British army. British impose high tax and because of the continue demand finished the treasury.

For british protection Indian rulers lost their interest to welfare of our own countries people. who faced very high sorrow and harassment. Here English were becoming strong. In the form of subsidary alliance English had hegemony important area's.

Indian rullers kept army for britishias. Whenever English want they will throw out the Indians and capture all the area's.

other european power also reached in the court of Indian rulers. But they will not effect Indians.

Like these we can say that Indian rulers lost their sovereignty and British made stronger themselves.
